During their last session the legislatures of several states passed new laws regulating the number of work ing hours for women. South Carolina passed a law limiting them to 60 per week in mercantile houses and the textile mills, of which there are so many in the state.

Ohio and Massachusetts a 54hour bill has been enacted. The Ohio bill applies to everything excepting hotels and mercantile establishments. Utah and Missouri have also passed nine-hour laws, says Health Culture. The ten-hour law which the legislature of Illinois enacted in 1909 is enlarged so as to include practically every kind of establishment where women are employed.

Wisconsin has established a 55 Judge Cox polled 51 per cent of the hour week, excepting night work, which is less. Minnesota has strengthened its ten-hour law by extending the penalty for violation so as to include manufacturing and mechanical establishments. The states of Washington and California have passed eight-hour day laws for women. The law of Washington applies to the usual mercantile and mechanical establishments, restaurants, hotels and laundries, but the California act applies also to telegraph, telephone, express and transportation offices.

WHEN BROTHER FRED CAME

By Claudine Sisson

Seated before a bright grate fire in mouth and his feet in another chair, Tommy Glens was content. was a winter blizzard, with snow piling up to the tops of the fences and cale chasing itself down the country highway; within the house was no other human being. The mother had gone away the day before on a short visit, and the cook had been given two days' holiday. Tommy had felt himself able to wrestle with skillet and coffee pot, and had been left to do it.

Tommy Glens gravitated between the city and his mother's manor He was supposed to be study ing for the bar, but he wasn't wearing out his brains. He had been at it a year, and yet he doubted if he could fill out the blank spaces in a bill of sale. Tommy, being twenty-four years old, was supposed to have his eye out for matrimony, but he hadn't. Tommy wasn't looking for trouble in and direction. . He just wanted to be let alone and take comfort.

And so the gale roared, the snow fell, the drifts piled up, and Tommy Glens smoked and read and yawned and wondered why so many people spent so much time in kicking when the kicks did no good.

A mile away, an hour or so before the lone young man sat down, Miss Nellie Grafton looked from the window on the storm for a minute and then turned to her mother and said:

Why, mother, it's growing worse

"It's a regular blizzard!"

'I guess it is.

"But I've got to drive to the depot with the cutter to get Fred. He isn't very well, you know, and he couldn't walk a mile and a half through this storm. He'll try to, though, if I'm Brother Fred was to come from the city on the 7 o'clock train. Had his train come through he would have been with it, and just outside of the depot he would have found three snow-covered objects representing his sister and a pony and cutter. train left the city on time, but lost two hours bucking the snow drifts. No sister, no pony, no cutter to greet him when he at length arrived! No hotel at the country station, and it was against orders to permit suspicious persons to pass the night in the waiting room. It was therefore Fred for home; and sometime before midnight he got there. It was to find that the pony had arrived an hour before him. dragging the cutter on its side and car back and the mother walking the floor and wringing her hands.

'She's been tipped over in some drift and is freezing to death!" was the wail.

Brother Fred should have stumbled over the victim if she had kept to the road, but as he hadn't he had to take it that his sister had staggered aside before falling. Of course he must return over the road. The pony was brought out to face the storm again, the whip vigorously applied and the search for a freezing or frozen girl was on.

As the pony made his slow way through the drifts the brother had time to wonder what a frozen sister would look like. Would she begin to freeze at her ears or her toes first? Would there be a smile on her face or a look of terror? Would her hands be folded over her bosom or would they be extended at full length, as if reaching for the aid that never came? ing the poor girl into the cutter might she not break in two and have to be carried home in halves?

Tommy Glens was so content hear that old blizzard raging outside while he was so comfy where he was that in time he dozed. In time he also dreamed. In some other time he dreamed that he was with Dr Cook within 2,000 miles of the north pole and that he was listening to cries for help. Those cries awoke him, and then he heard them in re-

Bareheaded and in dressing gown and slippered feet Tommy made rush for the arctic circle, which was the highway, and when he returned to the house he bore the half-insensible form of Miss Nellie Grafton in his arms. The Musical Sensation of the Year

The girl had made headway until exhausted, and the point reached happened to be in front of the Glene Three or four calls for help, and then Miss Nellie was a huddle in the snow. She only dimly realized it when she was carried into the house and the warm library and placed in the big rocking chair, and to this day she is not sure that Tommy Glens danced around her and exclaimed:

"What shall I do-damn it, what shall I do! It's a girl, and if I don't do something she'll die!

Tommy had done nothing as yetnot even to look for the brush broom to brush away the snow, when the victim revived enough to say: "A little wine or brandy, please."

In thirty seconds Tommy had the decanter from the sideboard, and the drink he poured out would have made a horse dizzy for the next three days. Miss Nellie only sipped it, and about five sips made her sit up and say: "How silly of me! I thought I could face the storm all right."

"You would have frozen to death, but I happened to hear your cries. I guess you are all right now, though.

Let me turn the chair to the fire." "I'll wait a few minutes and see if er has retired, I suppose?"

"She's away. "What!"

"And so is everybody else and I'm alone in the house "You here alone!" exclaimed Miss Nellie as she rose up and staggered toward the door. "Oh, come, now, Miss-Miss Grafton, I think it must be-you can't go out into this storm!" pleaded Tom-

"But you see-you see-

"You go back and sit down and I'll go out myself. I'll go up into the garret. I'll go down cellar. I'll find a nice warm snow drift. My name is Tommy Glens, if you don't know it, and I'm perfectly willing to have my ears frozen for your sake.' The girl halted, smiled and turned to her chair to say:

"I'm afraid you wouldn't look well with your ears amputated. Sit down and we'll talk. I have met your mother, and a dear old lady she is, but I have not seen you before. You may have met my brother. Fred?

'N-o-o, but I shall very soon now." "But we are to talk about reciprocity, the tariff, woman suffrage and all that, you know. Now, then, begin; and I will take the other side for argument's sake.'

It was two hours later that the desperate brother Fred, after being almost frozen in looking for a quite frozen sister, stumbled up to the door and rang the bell and disturbed a heated argument as to whether old maids should be given the ballot along with the rest of the sex. There were exclamations and explanations, and in the midst of them Tommy drew Fred to the front door and outside it to

FIND REST IN NEEDLEWORK

More Women Should Realize the Beneficial Effects Such Employment Has on the Nerves.

Not many realize what a restful effect needlework has on one, and it has this great advantage over books, that one is not lost to all around. woman of artistic tastes goes to the museum and makes sketches of wellknown pieces of art needlework and tapestry designs, and then sets to work to copy them. And the woman who would look charmingly picturesque well knows she is most fascinating sitting before a frame, with exquisite colored silks near her.

But this kind of needlework needs more thought than white work. As one sews, the thoughts come fast. One remembers one's grandmother, showing one how to put the needle in, and advising stroking the cotton under the hem neatly, when an impatient beginner would tie a knot. One also remembers the beautiful work she accomplished.

That strange and interesting woman Princess Helene von Racowitza, in her memoirs, amusingly describes her first attempt at tailoring, with which she was fielighted. And she says ever since her first success she has made all her own clothes, including lingerie. The princess must be a monument of patience and cleverness, because the making of gowns, in these days, is an art not lightly acquired.

Bandit Career Nipped in Bud.

An amusing tale of a would-be bandit comes from Belgium, Rene Tasseroul, aged 15, clerk in an office in Brussels, was sent by his employer to bank $160. His employer heard no more of him. A week later Rene, now an elegant and well-dressed youth, resident in a private hotel, astonished the manager of the house by rushing ing back, and I used Doan's Kidney into his private room, brandishing a pistol in either hand, and offering the old-fashioned alternative of "Your money or your life." Fortunately, the manager was too quick for him, and the young brigand was disarmed. Tasseroul confessed that he had spent his employer's money in purchasing a store of pistols, knives, etc., and had New York, sole agents for the United decided to rob the hotel-keeper in or States. der to obtain further funds before setting out for California, there to live take no other. the life of a bandit.

It was some time before the true cause was ascertained. It happened thus: A hawk had been chasing a flock of starlings which had sought refuge in a corner of the power house and had crowded together in terror between the overhead high tension wires and a lightning conductor. Thus a short circuit was established, which would not have had serious consequences had not the ground been in an extremely dry and parched the soil put the earth connection out of anteed to banish catarrh. action, and the current had therefore to seek another outlet, with the result stated. It was not until a little heap of carbonized starlings and an electrocuted hawk were found on the spot that the mystery was cleared up.

Usefulness of Glass.

Casually we regard glass as a perishable substance. The fragility of it, however, is overrated. Some of the uses to which glass has been put speak of its strength rather than of

It is some years since a well known society woman astonished the world by wearing a glass dress. Now dresses made of glass are no novelty. Glass carpets, rooms and buildings are or nose?

Pavements made of glass are to be found in Lyons, France. The French are enthusiastic over them. They claim for the glass pavements advantages over those made of asphalt, stone or wood.

In Germany water pipes are made of glass. This is quite an old custom. A more recent use of glass by the Germans is the making of telegraph poles. It has been an immense suc-

No Stricture on Powder Purchases by Government.

FORT AT CAPE HENRY EXCLUDED

Strong Talk Was Made for $150,000 rum. Appropriation for Proposed Defense-Effort Will be Made to Omit McCabe's Salary.

Washington, Feb. 28. - Phantom fleets of hostile ships, and smouldering ruins of capitals, the capitulation of Washington, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Norfolk, and the invasion of the hills of Virginia, vividly portrayed in the house, failed to obtain an appropriation of $150,000 for a site of a proposed coast defense on Cape Representative Holland of Virginia offered the amendment to the fortifications appropriation bill, which was under consideration. His arguments on the need of another defense of the lower Chesapeake were reinforced by the citizen soldiery of congress, and a protracted debate, in which representatives maneuvered ships and manned land batteries, was on.

Attack Powder Trust. Representative J. Hampton Moore championed the Holland amendment. Representative Shirley of Kentucky summoned Representa tive Fitzgerald of New York to his aid, and Chairman Houston sustained a point of order. The proposed fort at Cape Henry fell.

The appropriation bill was passed without any strictures on private purchases of powder by the government. Representative Good of Iowa renewed his attack on the powder trust, but lost. The passage of the fortification bill puts the house abreast of the progress of the long session of last year. The army, pension and fortifications bills now are before the senate.

With the coast defense bill out of the way, the house immediately took up the agricultural appropriation bill, which carries $15,836,976, $1,063,040 less than that for the current year, and $1,403,286 below the estimates of War on McCabe.

A fight is expected to develop over the bill. A determined effort will be made to strike out appropria tions for salaries of Solicitor Mc Cabe and 22 law clerks, his subordinates in the department of agriculture. It will be contended the this function of the agricultural depart ment can be directed by the department of justice, and that no authority in law exists for the legal staff which Mr. McCabe directs.

Debate over this will involve the controversies in the department of agriculture between Dr. Wiley and ing certain official reports.

WORKING HOURS OF WOMEN

Several States Have Passed Laws Limiting Them to Sixty Hours or Less a Week,

During their last session the legislatures of several states passed new laws regulating the number of work ing hours for women. South Carolina passed a law limiting them to 60 per week in mercantile houses and the textile mills, of which there are so many in the state. In Ohio and Massachusetts a 54-

hour bill has been enacted. The Ohio entirely to bill applies to everything excepting Louis and hotels and mercantile establishments. Utah and Missouri have also passed nine-hour laws, says Health Culture The ten-hour law which the legislature of Illinois enacted in 1909 is enlarged so as to include practically every kind of establishment where women are employed

Wisconsin has established a 55hour week, excepting night work, ened its ten-hour law by extending the penalty for violation so as to include anufacturing and mechanical estabishments. FIND REST IN NEEDLEWORK

More Women Should Realize the Beneficial Effects Such Employment Has on the Nerves.

Not many realize what a restful effect needlework has on one, and it has this great advantage over books, that one is not lost to all around. One woman of artistic tastes goes to the museum and makes sketches of wellknown pieces of art needlework and tapestry designs, and then sets to work to copy them. And the woman who would look charmingly pictursque well knows she is most fascinating sitting before a frame, with exquisite colored silks near her. But this kind of needlework needs more thought than white work. As one sews, the thoughts come fast. One remembers one's grandmother, showing one how to put the needle in, and Which is Better-Try an Experiment advising stroking the cotton under the hem neatly, when an impatient beginner would tie a knot. One also remembers the beautiful work she accomplished.

That strange and interesting woman Princess Helene von Racowitza, a her memoirs, amusingly describes er first attempt at tailoring, with which she was flelighted. And she says ever since her first success she has made all her own clothes, including lingerie. The princess must be a monument of patience and cleverness, because the making of gowns, in these days, is an art not lightly acquired.
